

"Fragment with heraldic devices, German, 14th Century. Silver and gilt strip and colored silks in brick and satin stitches on linen."
51 threads per inch evenweave fabric

The section shown to the left is very badly faded. All that can be gotten from the original is that the alternating stripes appear to have been darker than the background fill.

The pattern below is a partial reconstruction. The light colored bands in the pattern are completely worn away on the original. The stitching pattern shown is my best guess.

The pattern below is my best attempt at reconstructing the badly damaged bottom right panel of the piece (see pattern Y-009A). As less than 20 percent of the original embroidery survives, Please don't take the below as authoritative.

